

Dec. 17, 1950

This is to certify that I, Charles Moss, Glenrose, Texas, personally saw and inspected from about 1908 to 1918, on the north bank of the Paluxy river, six miles north-west of Glenrose, Texas, 1/4 mile west of the ford on the river, about 15 tracks or foot prints of apparent giant human beings. The tracks measured 18 inches from heel to toe, the five toes being plainly marked. The toes were about 6 ft. apart, then 7 to 10 feet as he started to run. Then only the toes and heels of the feet were in evidence. This was in an 8 inch layer of limestone along the river bank.

About 1918 a flood came on the river, excavated and carried away all the strata with the footprints. Downstream, later could be seen fragments of rock slabs turned upside down in the stream. It is possible that with proper power machine these slabs could be turned over, and new footprints found. Or the bank on the head of river could be excavated.
