Osborne - Caldwell track. I knew the late Bill Osborne quite well. On the afternoon that he completed the excavation of the track he had it in the back of his pickup truck on the Court House Square in Glen Rose. At approximately 3 P.M. that afternoon, I personally inspected the footprint in the actual limestone. The footprint in the limestone had the full shape of a human foot with all five toes. It was about sixteen (16) inches long - the oval shaped stone which he had cut from the rimbed was, of course, larger.

Some of the men who assisted Bill in cutting the track out of the rimbed were with him at the time. They were talking about the work they had done in the rimbed to take the track out earlier that same day.

Respectfully,
Glover C. Gibbs Jr.
