

In our excavation field studies we found that the rock substrate immediately under a dinosaur print was only minimally affected (compared to the Burdick print)

Lower laminations under a dinosaur track were sometime affected dramatically, and sometime not affected to any noticeable degree.